Pat claims he only went himself to catch the others; Anyone who has already broken their New Year's resolutions; Any Georgia or Alabama football fans; Veronica Link, got married over the holidays; Chuck Moore, raised $90,000 and 4.2 million pounds of food for the Turkey Trot; Any Browns fans for enduring 16 losses, what's 1 more loss of $1 to the fine?

Program: Cheri Hottinger introduced Sam Schnaidt, owner of Apple Tree Auction Center. Sam began by titling his speech, "55 Years of an Auctioneer: The Good, the Bad, and the Ugly," and he went on to tell us a number of very entertaining stories that he has experienced throughout his career.

When he was 12 he went to an auction at Buckeye Lake and bought a 1926 Hupmobile car for $20. He turned around and sold it for $100 and decided there was opportunity in auctions. When he went to get his auctioneer license in January 1964, the county judge asked him if he was of good character. Sam replied, "Of course." The judge asked for $10 and delivered his license immediately.

He and his wife were engaged at the Lion's Den – which used to be a steakhouse! He had an auction the evening they were engaged and another auction the day their first child was born. The Auction business has played a huge role in their lives!

Their auctions generally draw in crowds no matter the weather. They had a great turnout to an auction during a Level 4 snow emergency and another one when it was -7 degrees outside.

Sam once went to an estate auction at a home where he found a tea kettle that felt really heavy. He went to pour out the water, but nothing came out. He opened the lid to find a huge black snake wrapped up inside. He threw the tea kettle and snake as far out into the field as possible!

People often ask if they ever find money at the houses they do estate auctions at. One house they found over $100k in coupons. Another house they found money from years of Social Security checks tucked underneath the kitchen table. They found multi-thousands of dollars in $100 bills in books in one house, which Sam turned in to the attorney. They later realized they had the trash man take a bunch of books away and about 6 months later he had a brand new PT Cruiser convertible.

Sam has appeared on the TV show, "Hoarders," featuring a lady in Pataskala. He was filmed telling the lady that if they sold everything in her home, she would end up owing them because nothing was of much value. She was completely fine with that and understood. When it aired on national TV, they had the lady break down and cry after he said that to her. He found it humorous how they edited that scene to add to the drama for their show.
